PRINCETON HYMNS.

BY PROFESSOR BENJAMIN B. WARFIELD, D.D., LL.D., LITT.D.

In the literary product of the sons of Princeton Seminary, there is naturally included a good deal of religious verse. Few varieties of religious verse—from epigrams to epics—have been wholly neglected. But, as was to be expected, a considerable part of it takes the form of hymns. A large number of these hymns have been occasional in their origin, have served their purpose, and have passed out of sight. A not inconsiderable number of them, however, have taken their places in the permanent hymnody of, at least, the Presbyterian Church. In this “centennial year,” when Princeton Seminary is reviewing its work of an hundred years and, as it were, “taking stock” of the services it has rendered the Church and the Churches, it is worth while, perhaps, to endeavor to estimate with some exactness the contribution it has made to the hymnody of the Church also.

The most natural way of doing this is to pass in review the Hymn Books which have been most widely in use in the Presbyterian churches for the last fifty years or so, and note the hymns of Princeton men which have found place in them. We have therefore examined, with this end in view, a series of Presbyterian Hymn Books and, in order to get a little wider view, have added to them a few other very
